BJP set to sweep state elections: Opinion poll

DEVJYOT GHOSHAL & RAJENDRA JADHAV
New Delhi/Mumbai, October 18

RULING BHARATIYAJANATA Party (BJP) is set to sweep two state polls next week, the first since Prime Minister Narendra Modi's landslide win in the parliamentary election in May, a pollster said. The BJP is set to comfortably win elections in Maharashtra and Haryana, leaving the main opposition, Congress, trailing, according to a survey by polling agency CVoter released on Friday.

CVoter estimates that a BJP-led alliance in Maharashtra will pick up 194 of the 288 seats on offer. In Haryana, the party is predicted to win 83 of 90 seats, leaving just three for the Congress.

Voting in the elections will be held on Monday with the results expected to be announced on Thursday.

Several Congress leaders conceded

they had all but given up hope of posing a serious challenge to Modi and the BJP. In particular, the resignation of Congress chief Rahul Gandhi in July, after weeks of drama following the loss to the BJP in the general elections, has sown internal confusion, triggering infighting and exits, two party officials in New Delhi said.

"It's going to be a rout, and it will deflate morale even further," one of the leaders said, referring to the state elections. "It's like a slow-moving disaster."

Pranav Jha, the secretary in charge of Congress's communication department, said the party was undergoing a period of "cleansing and churning" and remained committed to taking on the BJP. "The people of India... can see through the diversionary drama of the ruling party, and realise that jobs, economy and issues of farmers can only be put on track by the Congress." REUTERS
